Dear Licensee:

Happy New Year! Out with the old and in with new beginnings that provide us with the opportunity to look back over the previous year to see what we have accomplished, what has changed, and what plans we have for the coming year. Like most businesses, we would be nothing without our customers, partners, industry representatives, and employees. We appreciate all your efforts and want to say, "Thank you," for all you do throughout the year. We had a very stimulating fall football season, and I hope that everyone enjoyed the holidays and was able to spend time with friends and family. We are proud that our products can be a part of the good times we all share, in keeping with our mission of bringing responsible consumers the products they want at reasonable prices. We are very excited about the new products and line extensions we've seen. In response to consumer demand, we now carry over 2,000 SKUs in our various stores. Specialty items continue to grow, from flavors and blends, to ready-to-drink cocktails.

In addition to bringing new products, we want to ensure that the products we list are available to our customers and on our shelves when needed. We are seeing fewer and fewer outages each week, as we continue to put the Pandemic-related supply chain issues behind us.

We continue to work with suppliers to maintain reasonable prices, and for the most part, we have been able to minimize price changes. The Alabama ABC operates using a fixed pricing formula, based on product costs, and we don't add additional markups, even for high-demand items.

While Alabama ranks among the nation's leaders in per capita state revenue from the sale of liquor, we also rank among the lowest levels for per capita consumption. This is due to our efforts to be an effective regulatory agency and a top-notch provider of programs for public protection and underage consumption prevention. We strive to balance the various parts of our mission, and thanks to you, our consumers, we can continue to do so in the future.

The license renewal season, which ran through September 30th, went smoothly this year with a total of 25,718 licenses renewed across the state. With the help and cooperation of licensees like you, we can all have a safe and successful 2024!

Sincerely,

Curtis E. Stewart

American Whiskey Grows Up

With such an explosion in producers, styles, and expressions, bartenders are having a field day with whiskey cocktails.

BY ANDREW KAPLAN

Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from the Fall 2023 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

Things could not be going better for the American whiskey category. It's firing on all cylinders as an ever-diversifying consumer base snaps up all kinds of new styles from producers both big and small.

"We've increased our whiskey shelf presence three times in the last three years," says Tom Agnes, Liquor Operations Manager, Brooklyn Center, Minnesota. "And every time we do it, more products are coming. And they're selling, that's the thing."

Adds John "Fitzy" Fitzpatrick, Spiritual Advisor at Warren American Whiskey Kitchen in

Delray Beach, Florida, "This is the most popular whiskey's been in history, which is crazy because we're only two decades removed from the absolute lowest of lows."

At the New Hampshire Liquor Commission's (NHLC) 66 locations, American whiskey sales show no signs of slowing. "It's an exciting time as established brands are responding with new and exciting offerings, and new brands are coming on the scene each day," says Mark Roy, NHLC spirits marketing and sales specialist. American whiskey is NHLC's second most popular category behind vodka.

The Distilled Spirits Council of the United States (DISCUS) says the category reached $5.1 billion in sales in 2022, an increase of 10.5 percent in revenue from 2021, outpacing all of the other top spirits categories except for tequila/mezcal. At the same time, American whiskey volume increased 5.2 percent, putting it just behind RTD cocktails and the industry leader, vodka. By both revenue and volume, American whiskey is now the third-largest beverage alcohol category, according to DISCUS.

AN ENGAGED CONSUMER BASE

If there is one engine driving the category to new heights, it's consumer passion. On- and off-premise purveyors across the country are increasingly impressed with the depth of knowledge of today's American whiskey drinker.

It's helping drive sales of barrel proof products in Minnesota. "[Consumers] understand what it is and why it's more money," says Agnes. "They're much more educated than they used to be. They're all part of a Facebook group that shares information, they listen to podcasts.

INTRODUCING ASCENSION KENTUCKY STRAIGHT BOURBON

PLEASE SIP RESPONSIBLY

“If there’s one thing I’ve found over the last several years it’s you’re seeing a lot more different types of people who are enjoying whiskey.”

They really dive into taste profiles and sourcing of product.”

In Ohio, Jim Canepa, Superintendent of the Ohio Division of Liquor, has also noticed the growing role influencers play in the whiskey community. “Many whiskey enthusiasts now turn to influencers for recommendations on new products to seek out and purchase,” he says. “This highlights the increasing role of social media in shaping consumer preferences and driving interest in specific whiskey brands.”

All this puts Fitzpatrick’s role as an educator at Warren American Whiskey Kitchen more in demand. “Consumers are looking to be directed,” he says. “They’re looking for people like me to tell them what’s new, what’s hot, what’s good.”

At the Westborough, Massachusetts-based Julio’s Liquors, owner Ryan Maloney does a lot of sampling on the store floor. “It’s a lot easier to have somebody taste it than to explain what it tastes like,” he says. “Every palate’s different, everybody likes different things.”

A DIVERSIFYING INDUSTRY

Maloney says women have long been participants in his store’s whiskey events. “We’ve always had quite a few women involved in whiskey here, but I think that’s becoming even more prevalent,” he says. “I think the demographic is spreading by both age group and gender.”

In fact, Daniel Rivas, general manager at Bank & Bourbon in Philadelphia, has been told women between 25 and 35 years old are the most sought-after whiskey demographic today by marketers. “If there’s one thing I’ve found over the last several years it’s you’re seeing a lot more different types of people who are enjoying whiskey,” he says.

Adds Mariena Mercer Boarini, Master Mixologist—North America, Wynn Resorts, “There was always an old stereotype of what a whiskey drinker is or was, and I think we’ve all come to the conclusion that everyone loves whiskey.”

“We’re seeing younger Gen Zers coming in and looking to try different things,” Rivas says. “They’re a little bit more experimental in terms of being open to trying new product.

Diversification is occurring among distillers as well. Products from minority-owned, female-run Uncle Nearest have been winning awards and exploding in popularity. ... It took just two years for the company to secure distribution in all 50 states and D.C., along with international distribution. "And we aren't slowing down anytime soon," says Kate Jerkens, the company's Chief Business Officer. "As an independently owned company, everything we have done has challenged the norms of our industry."

SHIFTS IN STYLES

As the consumer base for American whiskey continues to diversify, it impacts the demand for different styles. "A whiskey drinker today may have their go-to brand twice a week, but they like to try two new things twice a week, also," says Allen Katz, Director of Mixology and Spirits for Southern Glazer's Wine & Spirits.

Thomas Mooney, founder and CEO, Westward Whiskey in Portland, Oregon, says he's noticed a significant change in demand in just the past year. ... "All of a sudden the mix of what we're selling is completely upside down versus going into this year."

In New Hampshire, Roy says the demand for barrel proof options is among the three most interesting innovations in American whiskey he's seen this year, along with barrel finishes and unique flavor profiles. For Agnes in Minnesota, ryes have come on strong.

This summer [2023] excitement [built] around the Tax and Trade Bureau's (TTB) pending release of an official definition of American single malt. Maloney is excited about what that means for the category. "I think we may start seeing American single malt being a player."

Fitzpatrick believes bigger brands like Jack Daniel's and WhistlePig getting into the single malt game has been one of the most significant developments he's observed in the past year. He's also seeing more interesting wheat whiskeys, such as Old Elk in Fort Collins, Colorado. "They've become wildly popular out of nowhere."

Josh Judd, General Manager at

Seven Grand in San Diego, is seeing American single malts starting to gain traction with consumers.

Local whiskey distillers are also pulling out all stops to take a piece of this growing category's market share. In Ohio, Canepa says the state's 60 distilleries are working hard to cultivate a loyal fan base by offering tours and experiential events.

SINGLE BARRELS REMAIN STRONG

Barrel programs, at both bars and in stores, remain an enormous driver of business, as they promise customers something exclusive. ... Demand for single barrels has enabled retailers to drive traffic to their stores. Businesses have embraced single barrels as a creative way to differentiate offerings and partner with producers on the classic Whiskey Sour. ... In Dallas, Alex Aland, General Manager Hotel Zaza Dallas and its restaurant Dragonfly, offer what is called a Bourye Old Fashioned. ... “There are so many cities where people are really pushing the envelope,” he says.

NEARING A PRICE CEILING?

All of this enthusiasm and seeking out the next big thing in American whiskey continues to drive category sales—and prices. According to Canepa in Ohio, “the category continues to experience robust growth, with revenue increasing at a faster rate than volume. This growth can be attributed to the ongoing premiumization trends.”

Adds Agnes, “People are looking for the quality, and so far they don’t seem to be worried about spending the money to get it. If they know what they want, and they’re educated about it, they’ll spend the money to get it.”

Canepa says, “As prices approach the $80 mark, it appears that consumers may tend to hesitate, and they are less likely to make impulsive purchases of more expensive brands without a recommendation from a trusted source. This emphasizes the significance of building trust and establishing brand credibility among consumers.”

In fact, Maloney says he has been advising suppliers to try to target the $50 mark with their bottles, as customers are being a little more discerning. “I think you’re seeing fewer people saying, ‘I gotta have that in my collection.’ There’s got to be a real reason for it now.”

MORE ROOM FOR GROWTH

What will [2024] bring for American whiskey? Some predict coming months could see more use of the newly legalized 700-ml. bottle domestically. It’s a size that’s already popular overseas.

And the category continues to attract investments from players big and small. For example, Pernod Ricard USA this past March bought a majority stake in popular peanut butter-flavored Skrewball. Pernod also recently formed The American Whiskey Collective, a unit dedicated to “capitalizing on the strong growth—and growth potential—of its American whiskey portfolio.”

Pernod’s move aligns with the direction Katz, of Southern Glazer’s, sees the American whiskey category heading. “I think we’re still in the first third of a long arc,” he says. “And it goes in multiple directions. It’s almost as if the American whiskey range is a six-lane superhighway. On the right, it’s small craft distillers. On the left are the big brands that we all know. But each of their influences go both ways.”

THE TRUTH & MYTH OF St. Patty's Day

BY CLARE TAYLOR

St. Patricks day is the day that anyone's inner irish comes out to gorge on food and over imbibe on green beer; and St Patrick would encourage it! Patrick was a lover of alcohol and one of the narratives associated with him is when St. Patrick enters a public house and orders a pint that is poured shorter than it should. An atrocity to be shortchanged, Patrick corrects him and tells him 'You haven't realized that this sin of mismeasure is one of the worst sins that you can commit.'

St. Patrick is known to have played a huge part in converting the Irish to christianity, while using the symbol of a shamrock, a three-leaved clover, to exemplify the Holy Trinity.

From the 9th century, in commemoration of Patrick's death, Irish monasteries and churches celebrated by lifting Lenten restrictions for three days and three nights. Irish men went to the local tavern to order St. Patricks pot, and 'drown the shamrock' where people threw their worn shamrock into their drink and toasted the saint.

Perhaps we have been celebrating wrong?

There is no pot of gold, St. Patricks pot is really a drink.

There is no rainbow leading to gold. There are no leprechauns.

In fact the imagery of leprechaun gold coins, which are hidden by the mischievous creatures at the end of rainbows, actually finds its beginnings with the Vikings that invaded Ireland and hid gold all over the island in places so secret that most of it, to this day, hasn't been found.

But all these images we have of St. Patty's day are everything to do with... Ireland! And so this globalized holiday took its own story, with green beer, gold coins and small men that hide gold.

But no matter, celebrate in your own manner. This year take a break from the rigors of lent with these tasty cocktails.

BITTER ABOUT

Brunch

BY CLARE TAYLOR

There is simplicity in a spritz for brunch and bitter aperitivos are driving the brunch game.

Aperol is the trending aperitivo, a word meaning it is to be consumed before a meal and whet one's appetite. Orange in flavor and a good substitute when you're out of grand marnier or cointreau. It is on the sweeter side, candy like, so it can also make a good sugar substitute in a cocktail. Try subbing aperol for grenadine in a tequila sunrise or a hurricane, making a boozy but delicious alteration.

Aperol is, by definition, a bitter botanical liqueur that excites the average bruncher, when combined with soda and sparkling wine; you have a spritz. Spritzes are the craze and aperol seems to be behind all of our bars, but... what if you made a subbed campari for aperol, less jolly ranch flavor, more bitter orange.

Or a cappelletti spritz, like campari but less bitter intense and more wine forward.

But a spritz does not have to stop there. An amaro, a word meaning it is to be consumed after a meal to help digest it, tends to have a more bold and caramel flavor. However do not let these notions stop you in making a different sort of brunch cocktail, 2 ounces of any amaro with club soda and prosecco makes for a fantastic alternative.

Averna is bittersweet and lightly spicy, with flavors like cola, bitter orange, and herbal bark.

Montenegro is sweeter than other amaros and taste like orange zest, cherry, vanilla and clove.

Cynar is more bittersweet and vegetal with notes of caramel and toffee.

Fernet embraces mint and camphor, sweeter in flavor.

Don't try one, try all.

We sipped on bitter orange options then on amaros that give off a darker mouthfeel and now we reach the more refreshing and floral side of a spritz that uses ingredients like Suze or Lillet. Suze is more floral and herbal, with a hint of bitterness that is restrained. Lillet blanc, like suze, is softer on the palette with hints of orange blossom and pine. Lillet Rouge will be deeper in taste, with notes of baking spices. Add 2 oz of Lillet or Suze with prosecco and club soda in a wine glass, top with garnishes like rosemary or thyme.

Here are some alternative spritz cocktails that nix the bitter additives all together.

VODKA MEETS THE MODERN CONSUMER

BY KYLE SWARTZ

Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from the Fall 2023 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

Vodka remains a robust alcohol category. With 80.6 million 9-liter cases sold in the United States last year (according to our data team at the Beverage Information and Insights Group), vodka's size can be a detriment. ... But that big size obviously does count for much. Especially for leading brands. Vodka is a category dominated by loyal consumer followings.

Perhaps no other alcohol brand defines our modern era more than Tito's Handmade Vodka. Independently owned, American-branded, an entrepreneurial success story from the hyper-trendy city of Austin, Tito's is still growing. It was up 5.4 percent at a time when many competitors saw number in the opposite direction.

Coming in second place was Smirnoff. This classic brand that introduced much of America to the vodka cocktail, Smirnoff shrunk a modest 1.8 percent last year. ... New Amsterdam Vodka finished in third with a 3.7 percent haircut. ... After those three domestic brands, the new two top-sellers in vodka in 2022 were imports. Svedka was down 4.5 percent ... while Absolut rounded out the top five after a 1.8 percent decline.

Big brands that achieved growth last year included Platinum 7X and Barton's Vodka. Both hail from Sazerac Company, which remains much on the mind of consumers these days thanks to its red-hot whiskey portfolio.

Also among the gainers was Deep Eddy. This flavor-focused, all-natural vodka was bought by Heaven Hill in 2015, after the brand rapidly sprung up in Austin in 2010. Founded by a former winemaker, Deep Eddy is named for the oldest swimming pool in Texas—a 1900's-era attraction still operating along the banks of the Colorado River. Another entrepreneurial story steeped in Americana, coming from the hometown of Tito's.

So what does it take for a vodka brand, established or smaller, to succeed in this modern market?

READY TO DRINK

The rapid rise of ready to drink (RTD) and ready to serve (RTS) beverages in the past few years has benefitted vodka. "The market remains vibrant, propelled by vodka-based RTD and RTS, which are recruiting new drinkers into the category,” says Aleco Azqueta, Grey Goose, Vice President of Marketing, North America.

“As RTDs come into wider use, and people drink more spirits and less beer, vodka’s premiumization stretches beyond the bottle and into the can,” says Shaun Meglan, Texas Mixologist and Director of Product Education at Southern Glazer’s Wine & Spirits. “People spend twice as much on a nice vodka in a canned cocktail than they do for a single beer.”

It helps that vodka is a clean and easy spirit to work with in cocktails, lending itself perfectly for the kind of canned drinks consumers prefer nowadays.

“The increasing health consciousness of consumers drives the rise of low-abv spirits and the desire for convenience is driving the growth of RTDs,” says Damola Timeyin of the South African brand Vusa Vodka. “Both continue to have a positive impact on the vodka category, as we see the emergence of hard seltzers and RTD formats. Fortunately, vodka is a spirit that benefits from its versatility, allowing vodka brands to take advantage of these consumer trends.”

“The RTD space has grown to the largest category within the beer aisles in America, with about 27 percent of the market,” says Andrés Faustinelli, Master Blender, White Claw Vodka. “It’s greater than light beer. It represents a fundamental consumer shift over the last 25 years. All predictions are that momentum will continue in the future as consumers look for more flavorful products.”

MAKING MARTINIS

The Covid-19 lockdowns spurred a large movement in at-home mixology. Suddenly, everybody built a well-stocked bar into their place of residence. While on-premise reopening has certainly driven consumers back into bars and restaurants, people remain interested in mixing high-quality drinks at home. And what are they mixing or ordering when they do go out? Nostalgia is now the big trend. (Perhaps we pine for “simpler” days, before 2020 arrived with all its subsequent hardships and social upheaval.)

“We’ve really seen a resurgence in the classic cocktails of the 1990s,” says Sophie Clerc, Brand Director, Vodka, Moet Hennessy USA, who makes Belvedere Vodka. “Vodka martinis, opposed to gin-based martinis, are prominent at bars and restaurants again. So are Espresso Martinis, which entered the top 10 list of most-ordered cocktails at U.S. bars in 2022, according to research firm CGA by NielsenIQ.” Her last point is important. While classic cocktails tap into our current nostalgic mood, new twists on these drinks have proven extremely popular.

“Classic cocktails such as the Martini and Cosmopolitan are finding their way back onto menus, and we have seen strong affinity for new stars, such as the Espresso Martini, to further solidify vodka’s popularity on premise,” says Julie Yufe, SVP Vodka & Rum at Diageo, whose portfolio includes Smirnoff and Ketel One.

“The Espresso Martini has taken the industry by storm, and the momentum just keeps continuing,” says Reshma Dhati, Senior Brand Director of Marketing, Absolut. “Vodka as a category has now fully recovered in the on-premise. When consumers take a night off from being their own bartender, they are ordering trendy vodka drinks like an Absolut Espresso Martini or Cosmopolitan.”

“Martinis are trending and the cocktail has officially replaced the Moscow Mule as the number 2 most-popular drink order last year, according to NielsenIQ,” says Azqueta. “Emerging from the pandemic and economic uncertainty, we’ve seen that people simply want fun and uncomplicated drinks they can make at home with just a few quality ingredients. Overall, vodka’s superpower of versatility, mixability, and wide-ranging suitability meet emerging consumer needs and continue to drive growth,” he adds.

“We’ve seen a lot of experimentation

Tomato spritz

*1/4 ounce gin
2 ounces dry vermouth*

*1 1/2 ounces tomato water

Club soda, chilled,

Prosecco, chilled,

Garnish: cherry tomato, parsley stalk

*Tomato water: Mash 1 can of plum tomatoes, allow the mixture of tomato juices and skins to sit, refrigerated, for 30 minutes to an hour, in order for the juices to pick up the aroma from the skins. Add the mashed tomatoes into a strainer and allow to drip into a container until all the "tomato water" is collected at the bottom.

Add all ingredients except soda, prosecco and garnish into a Collins glass. Stir with ice. Top with club soda and prosecco, stir once more and garnish with tomato and parsley.

Tequila Morning Spritz

2 oz blanco tequila

2 oz grapefruit juice

1/2 oz lime juice

Prosecco

Club soda

Optional garnish, tajin salt

Rim the glass with tajin salt mixture. Add all ingredients except soda, prosecco and garnish into a Collins glass. Stir with ice. Top with club soda and prosecco.

Old Cuban Spritz

6 whole mint leaves

1 oz simple syrup

3/4 oz lime juice

1 1/2 oz aged rum

2 dashes Angostura bitters

Champagne or any sparkling wine

Club Soda

Muddle mint with simple syrup in a shaker, add lime juice, rum, and bitters, shake then strain into Collins and add enough ice to leave room for bubbly toppers. Top with soda and champagne. Garnish with a sprig of mint.

Elder Spritz

1/2 oz St-Germain

1 sprig mint

4 oz prosecco

1 oz soda water

Muddle st germain and mint in a wine glass (letting it sit for longer than a few minutes, intensifies the mint flavor). Top with ice, prosecco and soda. Stir and garnish with sprig of mint.

happening, with the Dirty Martini lately using different liquids to that touch of savoriness that makes it so iconic,” says Jean-Marie Heins, Chief Marketing Officer of Broken Shed Vodka. “The martini is still at the top of the list.”

VODKA PREMIUMIZATION

RTD and cocktail trends have both fueled premiumization in vodka, which remains critical for the category’s continued success and growth.

“Premiumization continues to drive volume in all segments of beverage alcohol,” says Mike Ginley, President NV Group USA, producers of Smoke Lab Vodka.

What exactly is premium vodka? It takes many forms. One area where consumers are willing to spend more is for flavored variants. ... “Flavored vodkas are anticipated to maintain strong growth with expected CAGR of 4.5 percent,” says Ginley. “Within the flavored segment, consumer interest in natural and authentic flavors—spice, herb, citrus, vegetable—continues to gain traction.”

“Over the years, there has been very little innovation and disruption in the vodka category, which is where White Claw comes in,” says Faustinelli. “In 2020, the regulatory body governing alcohol in America (TTB) changed the rules to allow distinction and character into the category. This allowed us to create our new triple wave filtered vodka, which uses the pressure of three 30-foot waves to produce an entirely differentiated product and create a vodka unlike anything else on the market, one that you would sip neat at room temperature in a champagne flute.”

QUALITY AND AUTHENTICITY

Other characteristics that provide premiumization in vodka include “better-for-you” ingredients, a sense of provenance, and brands that share consumer values.

“Consumers are more invested than ever in seeking out products with all-natural, high-quality ingredients, and the vodka category is no exception,” says Azqueta. “Grey Goose Essences, our line of vodkas infused with real fruit and botanical essences, is made with all-natural ingredients and has 0 carbs and 0 sugar.”

“In 2022, 3.3 percent of consumers in the United States spent $50 or more on a bottle of alcohol. Many of these consumers are Millennials and Gen Zers, with the conversation centering on sustainability and provenance and their impact on premiumization,” says Ginley of NV Group. Their Smoke Lab Vodka is “sustainably crafted one batch at a time in [India’s] first zero carbon-footprint distillery. It is crafted with locally sourced, superior-quality Basmati rice and pure Himalayan spring water, both ingredients indigenous to the brand’s native provenance.”

Vusa Vodka uses South African sugarcane sourced locally, aimed at creating flavors and branding that can stand out in a crowded market. “We believe provenance and premiumization is critical to creating distinctive and differentiated vodka products,” says

Timeyin.” Taking both into account allows us to introduce character, without sacrificing quality, and enables us to introduce consumers to flavors and personality informed by our provenance.”

Seeking brands with genuine provenance is similar to what drives consumers toward brands with social values. “Consumers are becoming increasingly aware of the products they are buying and the impact they have on the environment,” says Clerc. “As such, we’ve seen an increased demand for organic vodka in the market. ... We’re proud to offer people a product that they can enjoy and feel good about purchasing.”

It all ties into the modern consumer’s need to see themselves in the products they buy. “Consumers are looking for a brand that they would be proud to serve and resembles their values,” says Dhati.

“We’re seeing a major shift in the way consumers view their drinks from a sustainability standpoint. They want to know where—and how—their drinks are made, and as a result of this, we’re also seeing an increase in brand loyalty across the board,” says Heins.
